November 8th, 2022 (-$37)

By disciplined_daytrader · November 8, 2022

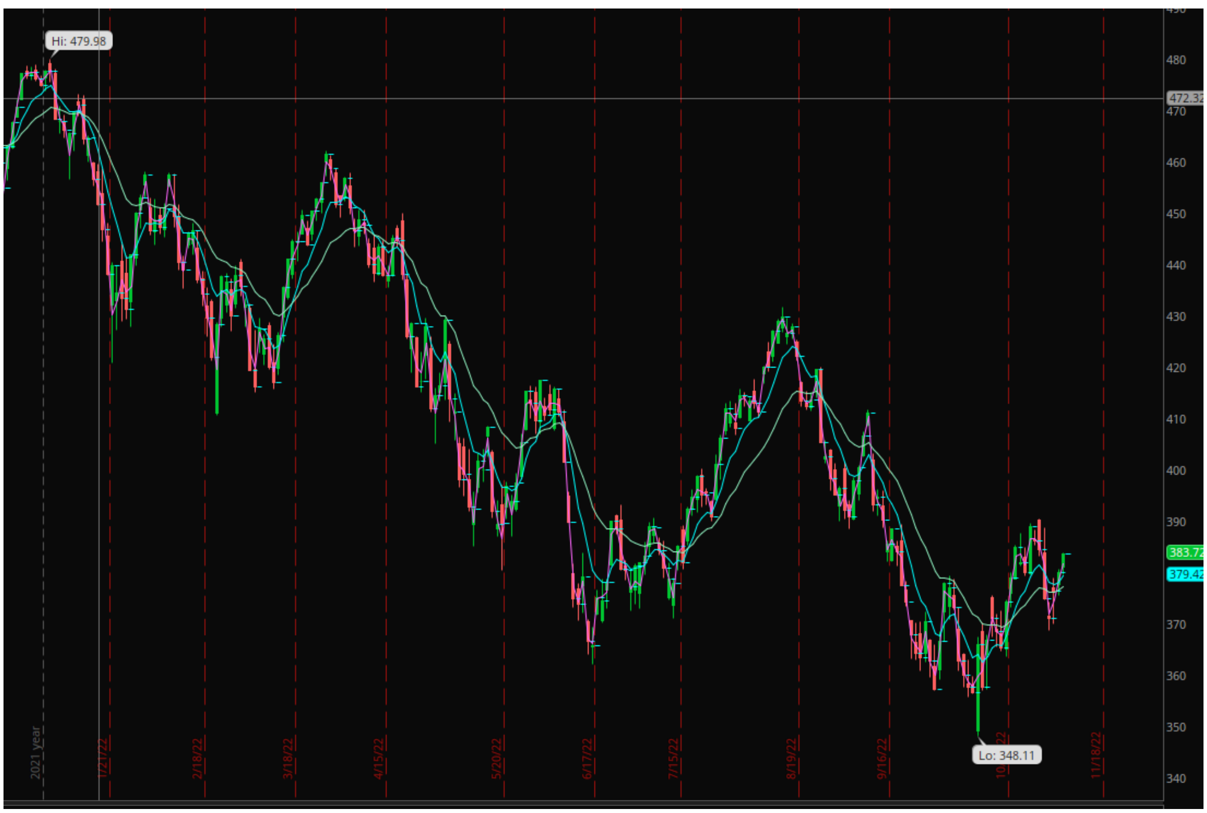
TL;DR

On November 8th, 2022, the author reflects on poor trading decisions resulting in a loss of $37. They criticize their own discipline and execution, particularly in shorting during an uptrend and ignoring market signals. The post serves as a cautionary tale about the risks of day trading without proper strategy.

November 8th, 2022

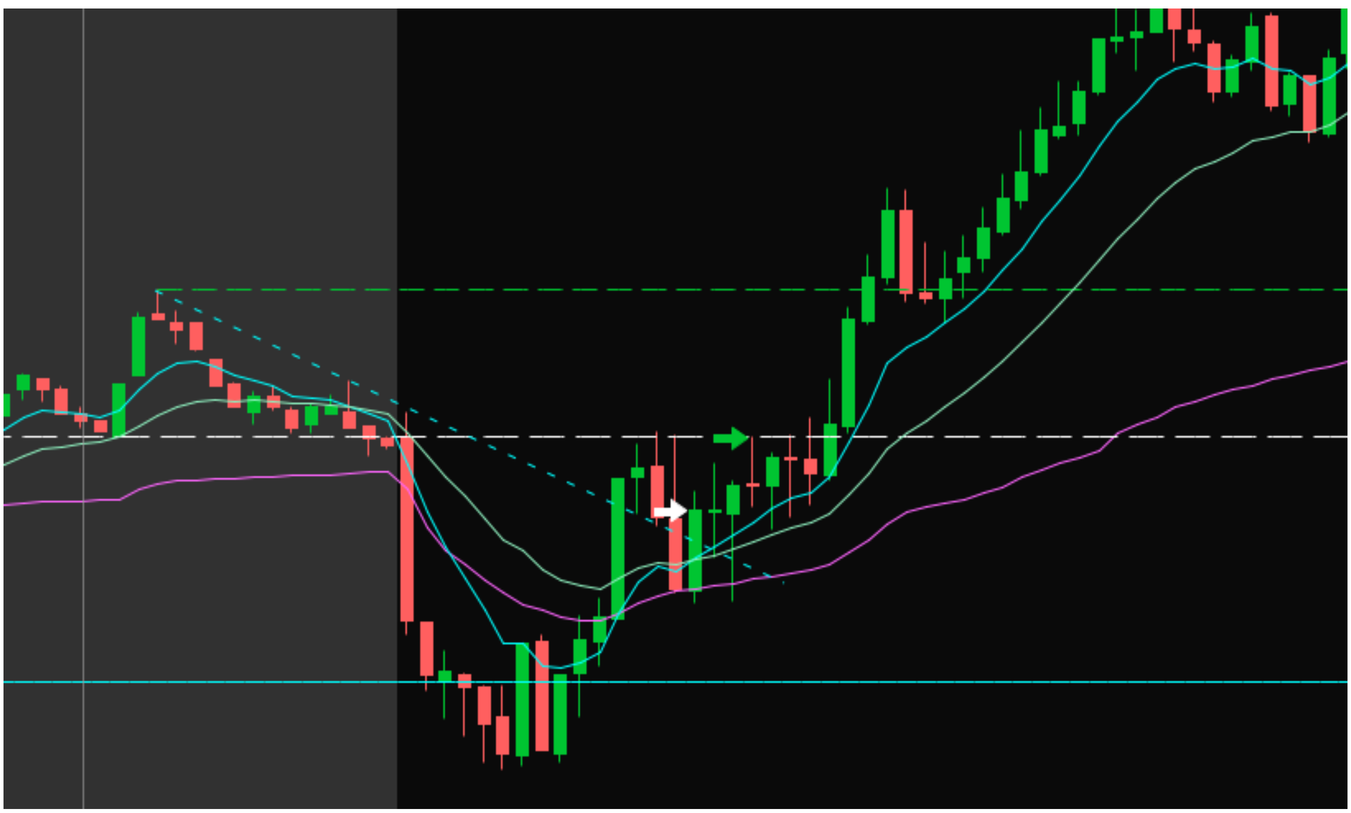
-Ouch, poor discipline and poor execution.

1yr:1d



1d:2m

1d:2m: 1st Trade: Trend Continuation Short



-There are so many reasons why this is a bad trade. Firstly, we are in an uptrend on the daily so shorting in general is shit. Secondly, I said 10 times that if we bounce hard on those first drops then it will be hard to short and that is exactly what happened and i kept shorting. Thirdly, We are above the downtrend so why the fuck would i short anyway? Idk bunch of retarded shit here so i guess when i beg for retarded questions and retarded profits then i will get a retarded answer. so disgusting go fuck yourself

1d:2m: 2nd Trade: Trend Reversal Short/ Supply Zone Short

- I get the idea behind this but damn what the fuck are you doing. Massive grinding green move all morning this thing is not reversing and its definitely not a good setup so why the fuck am I using big size on it? idk just stupidity but thats okay I wouldnt be trying to be a daytrader if I wasnt just a little retarded first cuz who the fuck actually does this for more than a month and continues? idiots LOL

EAsy Money:

Suck my dick and go long and jump off a cliff. when you get out of the emergency room youll be up 500%. dont bet against america and short this market even if we are 400% above the inflation target. fucking dipshit

FAQ

What happened on November 8th, 2022?

The author experienced a loss of $37 due to poor trading decisions and execution.

What were the main mistakes made in trading?

The author shorted during an uptrend, ignored market signals, and used large position sizes on bad setups.

What is the author's attitude towards their trading mistakes?

The author expresses frustration and self-criticism, acknowledging their poor discipline and execution.

What advice does the author give about trading?

The author suggests that shorting the market is unwise, especially when it is in an uptrend.

How does the author feel about day trading?

The author finds day trading challenging and acknowledges that it can attract individuals who may not be fully prepared.